Where Else But the Wasatch Wave Can You find a Review of "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" 3 Weeks Before it Opens

If you saw "Raiders of the Lost Ark" you're gonna love "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom." George Lucas produced and Steven Spielberg directs this blockbuster which opens as Indiana Jones is about to deliver the ashes of a long dead emperor in exchange for a very large diamond, from there the viewer is propelled into a world of adventure and excitement from the time the movie begins until the last action packed moment. Harrison Ford returns as Indiana

Jones, with Kate Capshaw the very beautiful love interest. Steven Spielberg's touch is apparent with many children integrated into the plot.

I just can't divulge the plot like some reviewers, just be sure and see this movie...I highly recommend it...

Now showing at the Avon is "Splash", rated PG and starring Daryl Hannah, Tom Hanks and John Candy. This is a comedy I highly recommend. Director Ron Howard and writers Lowell Ganz and Babaloo Mandell have fashioned a real audience pleaser that manages to be both innocent and sexy. Ron Howard has taken a catchy idea and given it a treatment that's slick and entertaining. It is rated PG for flashes of nudity by Daryl Hannah and language.

Held over at the Ideal is "Footloose" starring Kevin Bacon, Lori Singer, and John Lithgow and rated PG. Filmed all over Utah, there is a little known fact about a make-out scene scouted by Paramount to be filmed in Valley Hills overlooking Heber at night, but it wasn't. If you are one of the few who hasn't already seen "Footloose" once or twice, you might be thinking it's a "son of Flashdance" which it wasn't. There are similarities here and there in the musical numbers, but "Footloose" has more interesting characters and more talented actors. The PG rating "Footloose" carries is for language and the violence in a couple of fist fights.

Next week I'll tell you about "Rhinestone" where Dolly Parton turns Sylvester Stallone into a...singing star??? And I'll tell you about the new Clint Eastwood movie called "Tightrope". Until then, we'll see you at the movies...
